THE POEM

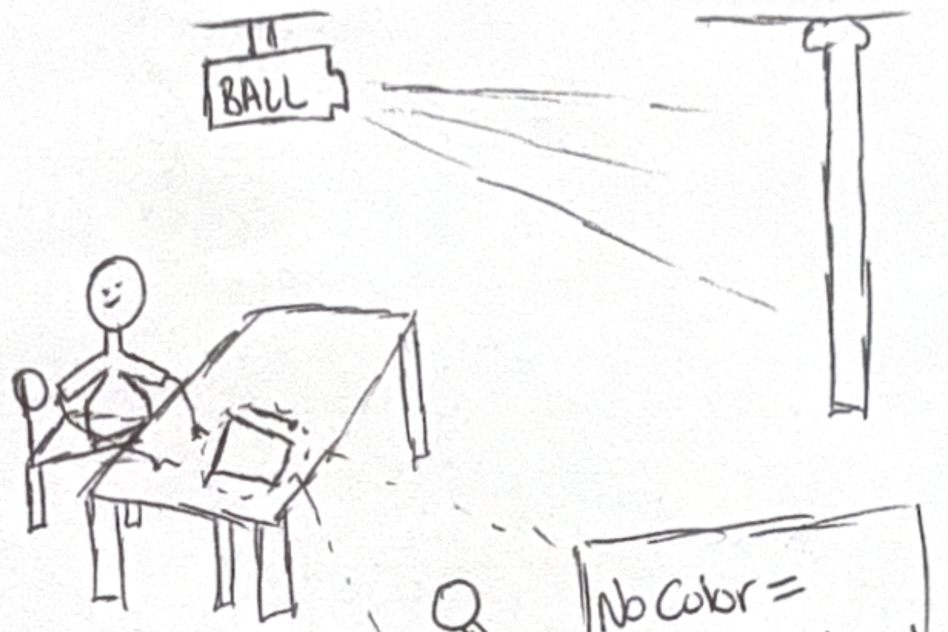

Rosenbaum means "Rose Tree" and the Virgin Mary!

Thorne is the crown of thorns!

Jacob means the Ladder!

They were told a list of names was a religious poem, and they made it have meaning from their prior expectations/experiences.

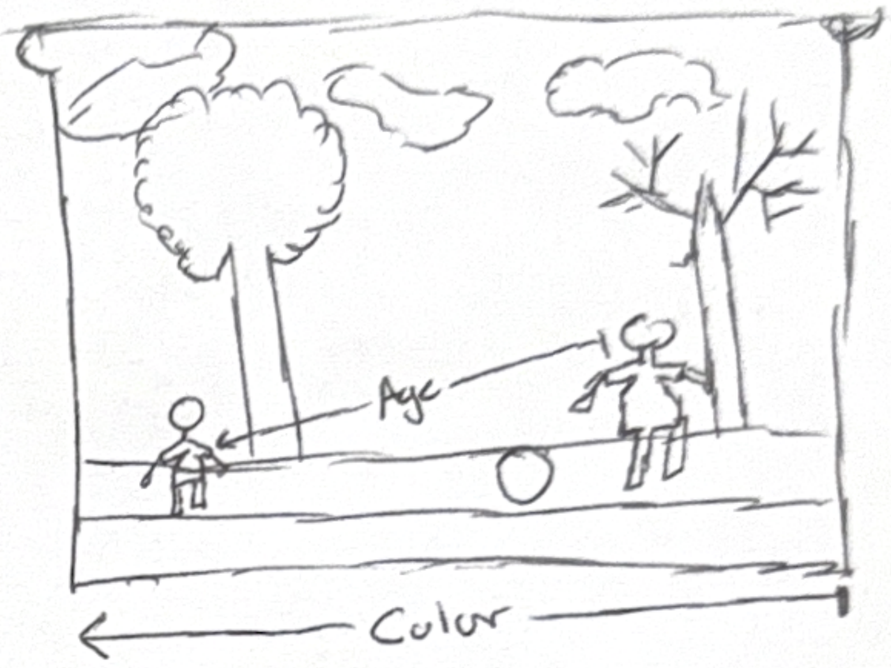

ENGLISH CLASS

No Color =
Quiet, Reserved, Lonely
Full Tree=Old Age
Picture of Eden,
Vibrancy of New
Old mans. Child.
Internal Youth

I came into the film expecting meaning from every scene, so I treated it

RETURN OF COLOR

The film linked youthfulness and color together, I didn't need to invent that link.

Because of my grandfather always loving to play games and cricket, dispite his old age, I saw the young figure as the old mans Internal youth which had never left him.

THE REWIND

1:05

Looking back, I chose hopeful reading because of my grandpa, but the film only gave me 2 options.

THE SUMMARY

Fish argues that readers make the meaning based on their own experiences and communities rather than finding it, and "Ball" mostly proves him right. My habits from English class and my yard games with my grandfather shape how I interpreted the film.

But, the film still set the limits: color returned as the old man grew younger, and the ball rolled back as he rested. Reading is neither pure discovery or pure invention, instead it occurs in the middle of a readers experiences and the texts story.
